Best Stock-Fund Managers of 2022

In a brutal year for investing, a handful of stock pickers managed to post positive returns. The winner was up nearly 32%.

By Suzanne McGee

Well at least it wasn't as dreadful as the Great Depression. Or even the financial crisis of 2008.

But for any mutual-fund manager trying to cope with the sea of red ink that flooded financial markets in 2022, that's meager consolation. In a year when soaring interest rates and sky-high inflation left the S&P 500 index with a 19% loss and triggered an even worse year for the bond market, an estimated $8.2 trillion of stock-market wealth in the U.S. simply evaporated.

Even most of those value- and income-focused mutual-fund managers who "outperformed" the broad index did so by confining their losses to the single digits—little comfort for investors.

Indeed, of the 1,410 actively managed mutual funds that met the criteria for inclusion in the Winners' Circle, The Wall Street Journal's quarterly survey of top-performing stock managers on a 12-month basis, a mere 40 wrapped up 2022 in positive territory. The average loss for the whole group, according to data provided by Morningstar Direct, was 18.2%.

A faithful finish

Unsurprisingly, other top-performing managers in the 2022 year-end Winners' Circle also beat the odds and triumphed by bucking conventional wisdom.

Fund (RCMFX) may have only $51.7 million in assets, but it turned in an impressive return for its investors, wrapping up the year with a 21.2% gain. And the fund is managed by Schwartz Investment Counsel in Plymouth, Mich., which oversees a universe of other portfolios, including Ave Maria Value Fund (AVEMX), the Catholic-values fund that ended the year with a 4.2% advance, putting it in 11th place in our survey.

of Schwartz Investment Counsel. He and son Tim, the firm's chief investment officer, began adding energy stocks to Schwartz Value a few years ago, just as the pressure on pension funds and other mutual funds to divest their fossil-fuel holdings began to take effect.

"Our focus is on buying out-of-favor stocks when they are cheap, and when we believe they have a great recovery potential," the elder Mr. Schwartz says. "When the energy sector had gotten so depressed it was ridiculous, we bought those stocks aggressively." By the end of 2022, 41% of Schwartz Value's assets were invested in an array of energy companies. "That decision has been a big boon for us," he says.

Like Mr. Davolos, Mr. Schwartz is a fan of Texas Pacific Land, by far the fund's single largest holding at 27.6% of fund assets. But he adopts a more, ahem, catholic (as in "all encompassing") approach to energy investing, allocating capital to major global integrated producers and refiners like Chevron Corp., exploration-and-production companies such as Devon Energy Corp. and service companies like Schlumberger NV.

A Yeti fan

And he, too, is casting a (slightly) wider net. While hanging on to precious metals investments (Franco-Nevada and producer Barrick Gold) and what he sees as core value holdings in Berkshire Hathaway, last year Mr. Schwartz added new positions in an array of specialty manufacturing companies like A.O. Smith Corp. (water treatment and heating) and Yeti Holdings Inc. (drink coolers, drinkware and related gear). One of his largest new holdings is in RH, formerly known as Restoration Hardware, the specialty retailer of luxury furniture. "We like companies that are out of the mainstream," he says, adding that RH shares now change hands for 15% more than the average price Schwartz Counsel paid to establish its position starting in September 2022.

Score at the Quarter

Stock funds posted a positive fourth quarter, but it wasn't nearly enough to pull the full year out of the red. Average total return for U.S. diversified funds.

For the Ave Maria Value Fund, the Adviser invests only in securities that meet the Fund's investment and religious requirements. The returns may be lower or higher than if decisions were based solely on investment considerations. The method of security selection may or may not be successful and the Fund may underperform or outperform the stock market as a whole. All mutual funds are subject to market risk, including possible loss of principal. The Fund's investments in small- and mid-capitalization companies could experience greater volatility than investments in large-capitalization companies.

The Schwartz Value Focused Fund is a non-diversified fund. Because the fund may invest in securities of smaller numbers of issuers, the Fund may be more exposed to the risks associated with and developments affecting an individual issuer than a fund that invests more widely. This may, therefore, have a greater impact on the Fund's performance. Performance can be affected by market and investment style risk. Mutual Fund investing involves risk and principal loss is possible. The Fund's investments in small- and mid-capitalization companies could experience greater volatility than investments in large-capitalization companies.

Prospective investors should read the prospectus carefully and consider the Fund's investment objectives, risks, charges and expenses carefully before investing.
