The Fund's exposure to energy and financial stocks accounted for the relative underperformance for the quarter. Interest rates and corporate credit spreads bounced around but ultimately finished the quarter lower and tighter than where they started the year. Inflation at the last reading was 6%, still well above the Federal Reserve's (the Fed) 2% target. The Fed is now trying to tame inflation and offer emergency lending to banks that took excessive interest rate risk when rates were at historic lows. The net effect of the Fed's action is still unknown, as it implements both easing and tightening monetary tools at the same time.

The top contributors to the Fund's performance were the common stocks of Watsco, Inc. (HVAC equipment and supplies wholesaler), Texas Instruments, Inc. (semiconductor devices) and Fastenal Company (industrial equipment & supply wholesaler). The weakest performing assets were the common stocks of Texas Pacific Land Corporation (royalty income - oil and gas), Truist Financial Corporation (banks) and Chevron Corporation (integrated oils).

The Fund has been modestly extending duration and will continue to do so as long as interest rates remain elevated. With the adjustment, the Fund remains conservatively positioned regarding credit quality and interest rate risk. Additionally, dividend-paying common stocks continue to offer an attractive combination of income and price-appreciation potential.

We appreciate your investment in the Ave Maria Bond Fund.

The Adviser invests only in securities that meet the Fund's investment and religious requirements. The returns may be lower or higher than if decisions were based solely on investment considerations. The method of security selection may or may not be successful and the Fund may underperform or outperform the stock market as a whole. All mutual funds are subject to market risk, including possible loss of principal. The Fund's investments in small- and mid-capitalization companies could experience greater volatility than investments in large-capitalization companies. The Fund invests primarily in fixed income securities and as a result the Fund is also subject to the following risks: interest rate risk, credit risk, credit rating risk and liquidity risk. The investment performance assumes reinvestment of dividends and capital gains distributions. Performance data reflects certain fee waivers and reimbursements. Without such waivers, performance would have been lower. The Bloomberg Intermediate U.S. Govt./Credit Index is the benchmark index used for comparative purposes for this fund. Indexes do not incur fees and it is not possible to invest directly in an index. The 10-Year U.S. Treasury note is a debt obligation issued by the United States government that matures in 10 years. A 10-year Treasury note pays interest at a fixed rate once every six months and pays the face value to the holder at maturity.
